

Graeme and his wife, Heather, and their two young daughters, Claire and Morgan currently run a beef operation near Madden, Alberta. They manage a cow calf operation with a focus on year round grazing both high legume pastures and annual crop grazing. They have been successful in incorporating intensive rotational grazing and winter grazing strategies into their management system. Graeme is in his 28 year of living in Canada after moving from Queensland Australia and has been involved with some of his mentors for most of that time, mentors like Doug Wray, Jim Bauer ,Grant Lastiwka and members of FFGA

Graeme was past Vice President on the ARECA (Agricultural Research Extension Council of Alberta) Board and sits on the research advisory committee of the ABP, sitting Director BCRC, Canadian round table for sustainable beef research committee and the UK and Canada AgriFood research council and is a mentor on the young cattleman's leaders program and mentor of the beef council researcher mentorship program and past director on the board of FFGA , and is on the Calgary stampede international agriculture committee

His passion for looking at new ways to do things and finding ways to be profitable both by cutting the bottom line as well as looking outside the box to improve profit margin and run a beyond sustainable cattle grazing operation as well as improving the soil and environment they work with on their operation.

Graeme has been involved in the agricultural industry in his capacity as director with ACIDF, FFGA, BCRC, CRSB and ARECA to try and help advance agriculture in any way. He is also president of union forage. He is always willing to lend a hand and keen to talk anything grass to people. He has also shawn a few sheep in his passed life.
