

Dr. Lynn Tait was born and raised in Alberta and graduated from the University of Saskatchewan in 1990 with degrees in both Agriculture and Veterinary Medicine. She is currently the owner of OC Flock Management Inc, which, since 1996, has provided small ruminant veterinary and consulting services as well as operating CFIA approved and CETA certified semen and embryo production facilities. Currently, OC Flock is one of only four facilities in the world that is accredited to export semen and embryos to the EU. Over the past 25 years, Lynn has maintained a sheep flock of her own and has been actively involved in the sheep and goat industries both domestically and internationally. In addition to her private practice, she teaches small ruminant medicine as a contract instructor at the University of Calgary, College of Veterinary Medicine. OC Flock Management is a member of the Disseminated Veterinary Learning Community that provides senior year students from UCVM with clinical rotations in small ruminant medicine and advanced reproductive technologies. OC Flock also supports youth in the industry through sponsorship of a number of 4H clubs and 4H on Parade in Calgary.
